- Love is blind,
 — all busy-head destroys,
 — blinds the wife,
 — gives eye-sight to the blind,
 — is love's reward,
 — is always blind,
 — a blind and foolish passion,
 — though blind, yet artful,
 — imparts a style, more excellent than art,
 — skill of, like the art of war,
 — monarch passion of the mind,
 — rais'd on beauty, will like that decay,
 — never thinks of rich and poor,
 — a burglarer,
 — a fire,
 — returns, and pride gives way,
 — be the business of our life,
 — sweet vicissitude of,
 — power of,
 — hard to cure,
 — fond, inglorious toil,
 — temple of,
 — a malady, without a cure,
 — endures no tie,
 — bears no rival,
 — what misery attends on,
 — proud usurer of reason's throne,
 — a poignard hung but by a single thread,
 — banquets kill or surfeit all that eat,
 — fire of Fate,

O

Oak, age of,
Oaks, fair Albion's best defence,
Oath to make, what,
—— breaking of, saint-like virtue,
—— supplies the vacancy of sense,
Oaths to pin on the sleeve,
—— not to be taken literally,
—— are but words,
—— tests of true and false,
Ob and Sollers, paltry,
Obedience, best,
—— happiness,
—— entire happiness,
Obelisks, mark'd with dark Egyptian lore,
Oberon, a subtle spright,
Object may deceive, by being new,
—— alter'd, the desire the same,
Objects, different of different minds,
—— great and exalted, our admiration,
Obscenity vile, no pardon should find,
—— with dulness, shameful,

 — his digressions accounted for,
 — his characteristical beauties,
 — in his odes not a single antithesis,
 — with desultory fury borne along,
